The photograph above is of "The Castle." The Castle is located along the side of the Ruskin Inlet. The Ruskin Inlet is a part of the Little Manatee River. The yard and the river and the house are beautiful.

This building is locally known as the Castle in Ruskin History. The year this structure was built is 1926 which makes it 79 years old. The home is located in southwest Ruskin, Florida. This home was built in the very early days of Ruskin. The house is a blocky two story building in Downtown Ruskin. There are beautiful trees around the home and it looks like a sweet little meadow that leads to the shore of the Ruskin Inlet next to the house.

"The Castle" is important because it is a part of Ruskin's early History and destroying this building would ruin history. If we do not save Ruskin's historical buildings it could ruin our history for everybody that lives here. If these buildings are demolished the History of Ruskin will be gone.

The residence is colored gray with a red outline. The yard has many beautiful green trees and shrubs. It is good that the owners of "The Castle" take such good care of the house that is why it is not torn down yet. It is not been torn down because people have been taking excellent care of this beautiful house. That is why we should take care of these buildings that are nearly 100 years old!
